The Truckee river cannot expect to hold the Arizons, New Mexico and Texas lumber trade, which last year was so large. There are immense bodies of fine timber hundreds of miles nearer, that must scon be opened. In Tulare and Fresno counties there are sugar and yellow pine forests equal to any on the coast, to say nothing of the groves of sequoias scattered about. This timber comes down in many places to within twenty miles of the Southern Pacific railroad There are already several flumes carrying out lumber, and more must soon follow.

An item started the rounds the other day, saying that Nye county, Nevada, is the largest county in the United States. If editors would read their Gazerrs they would not make such blunders. Over a week ago we published this item:

"Nye county, Nevada, is the fourth largest county in the United States. Custer county, Montana, has 36,500 square miles; Cnoteau county, Mon-tana, has 27.380 square miles; Sweet-water county, Wyoming, 30,275, and Nye county, Nevada, 24,000."

the Boltomless Pit in the Facramen

Between Benicia and Suisus the sifroad company is having a large contract in the way of filling up a place that seems to be almost a botomless pit. The track runs through a tule and marshy country for a long ways, and shakes like jelly when a train goes over it. After all manner of experiments, it is found that the only way to make a road bed is to fill in gravel clear to the bed rock. They tried to pile it, but the peat-like soil had, is here to-day, would not bold up a stick of timber; and the trestles soon looked like jack straws. It was found that about fifty feet down there was a solid foundation which seemed to be the old river bed, as it sloped that way. They commenced piling in gravel, and have put in forty cars a day for over four put in forty cars a day for over four years.
